Civil Society Organizations and the CGIAR

CSOs and the CGIAR: from Dialogue to Action

Civil society organizations (CSOs) – by which we mean the non-profit sector, including NGOs, farmer organizations, advocacy groups, universities and advanced research institutions – are key partners in the CGIAR.

The 15 Centers and 4 Challenge Programs it supports together work with as many as a thousand CSOs. These partners, by helping ensure the relevance of our research for development and by boosting its effectiveness, contribute to accomplishing our shared goals of strengthening food security, reducing poverty and improving natural resource management in the developing world.

With the aim of further improving this collaboration, the CGIAR developed the Strategic Framework for Engagement between the CGIAR and CSOs in 2006, which offers a series of recommendations designed to give civil society a stronger voice in the CGIAR and foster mutual learning in our joint endeavors.

As a start toward implementing its CSO engagement strategy, the CGIAR organized various events in cooperation with the CGIAR Annual General Meeting 2006 (AGM06), held in Washington, D.C., during early
